

Portugal has some nice religious ceremonies. The flower torch parade in São Bras is one. You dress the streets with flowers – kilometers of it and you create flower decorations in various kinds – most in the form of a torch and you parade the streets with music. People living along the streets hang their nicest bed- or table cloths at the balcony to show their contribution. A very nice ceremony, every Easter.

Annie, Laila, Raymond

Afterwards

And then lunch

There is a different ceremony in Loulé. In the early Easter days they bring "The Madonna" from the church to a place in town and after Easter they bring her back again.

The closer to the church the higher is the speed – she likes to come back.

A national festival and we took the bike

